Happy New Year

Happy 2017!

Greetings!

We hope everyone has recuperated from all the holiday celebrations and is now preparing to settle into 2017.

Penny has just returned from spending the holidays with her parents in Ontario and Lori was central command for all her family and their celebrations here in the Halifax area.

We are excited for 2017 to get up and running. We have lots planned for the new year including the celebratory launch of our new fusing department with Fuse-A-Palooza starting on January 16, a new class schedule, new glass, and new restoration projects.

Please take a moment to check the "Quick Links" (right side column).

Happy Fuse-A-Palooza!

Join Cranberry as we celebrate our new and improved Fusing Department.

Fuse-A-Palooza is an all-out crazy fusing frenzy; partying at one place (Cranberry Stained Glass) with a ton of people like there's no tomorrow!

There will be demonstrations every day (Mon., Jan. 16 - Thu., Jan. 19) related to all things fusing. Check out the DEMO SCHEDULE. Snacks, videos, and door prizes provided from several our generous suppliers!

2016 Highlights

PLUS! Friday, January 20 will be an Open Fusing Day. There are big savings for those who want to participate but check for special considerations. You will have to have attended a demo earlier in the week. It is a great deal and we want to reward those who participate!

As a follow-up, Cranberry will be offering their first FUSING 101 Course: A comprehensive program designed for people who just want to fuse glass, with or without stained glass experience. Check our website for more information and details of the numerous projects that you will complete during the course.

Restoration for St John's United Church almost complete. 20 square feet with very little documentation.

Lori's trip to Ireland earlier this summer.

One of Penny's hikes around Nova Scotia.

Early in the New Year Lori will likely be heading for Fredericton & Saint John, New Brunswick for a quick weekend, weather permitting.

Also, after Fuse-A-Plaoza and before the end of the month, Lori will be heading for Sydney, Cape Breton to deliver a car to her daughter...long story :)

Lori will be happy to meet customers along the way. Let her know if there is something you would like her to bring along. This is a great opportunity to avoid paying those extra shipping charges. She will put it on Facebook when the dates are firmed up or contact Lori in the new year for more information.

Social Media

I spend quite a bit of time and effort on social media for Cranberry, primarily Facebook and Twitter. Over the years I have grown my followers organically (without any external or artificial friend or follower purchases). So, I am confident that most who follow Cranberry on social media are genuinely interested in what I post.

For me, Facebook and Twitter offer opportunities to show what is going on in the Studio, in the industry and, to some extent, they are platforms to show my interests and sense of humour almost daily. I like to think that the information I post is helpful, interesting and entertaining to glass enthusiasts and friends alike.

In 2017 I am going to be investing more time creating videos under "Cranberry Stained Glass Tool Box Talks". I will be creating a series of short videos on tricks of the trade and other supporting skills for stained glass, fusing and eventually mosaics.

I will be taking a course in the new year in advanced social media and hope to become a little more savvy with Youtube, Pinterest, and Instagram.

If Facebook or Twitter are not your thing, you can always catch the latest 3-4 posts on the cover page of our website without having to sign-up. Just scroll down.

Since 2008, I have loved all the Likes, Follows, Comments, Shares Posts, Messages and Reactions. I have also enjoyed all the Groups that I joined over the years. It has been a wonderful source for inspiration and support. Thanks you all!
